

Searching for health information? Many of us look on the internet.

Over 90% of women use at least one medicine during pregnancy and about 70% use at least one prescription medicine.

At least half of all women ages 18 to 44 will search the internet to find information related to their health.

Our study found at least two dozen websites listing medicines reported to be safe for use in pregnancy, but safety data are not available for about 40% of the ingredients in those medicines.

Check with your health care provider about information related to medications in pregnancy that you find online.
